

CHAPTER III

METHODOLOGY

A. Research Methodologies

This study employs a qualitative research method that includes the stages of description, reduction, and selection. The research stage begins by observing the depiction of the characters and the issues raised in the novel, then continues to reduce the information obtained from the description stage and focuses on the issues raised in the theme, and finally connects the data obtained with the theory used.

1. Research Design

This research was a descriptive qualitative study, and the results were presented using a qualitative research methodology. Some experts have a different point of view and have an opinion concerning this sort of study. Shark (2002) state that according to the definition of meaning inquiry, researchers aim to understand how others make sense of their experiences, and that this sort of inquiry is founded in the world of experience. He describes qualitative research as "a sort of systematic exploratory research into meaning" (p. 4), implying that research is planned, arranged, and made public in accordance with rules agreed upon by members of the qualitative research community. Data has been collected through library research, which included looking for relevant books, journals, articles, and other sources. Using this technique, the researcher identified statements that contradicted the maxims present in the novels.

Dikomentari [R1Q1]: Tuliskan desain penelitian disertai referensi

2. Source of Data

Dikomentari [R1Q2]: Tuliskan sumber data

The types of data in this thesis are referred to as primary data, the primary data are the source and target languages. The data for this study came from JK Rowling's novel Harry Potter, which was published on July 16, 2005, on pages 607 (British) and 652 (AS) in Indonesia under the title Harry Potter dan Pangeran Berdarah Campuran

3. Method of Collecting Data

Dikomentari [R1Q3]: Tuliskan metode pengumpulan data

The method of data collection in this thesis is to use the method of observation and documentation, namely the researcher choose a novel to be used as material for the thesis

B. Outline of Research Report

There are five chapters in this study. The first chapter provides a general background for the study, reasons for selecting the topic, statements of the problem, objectives of the study, significance of the study, and an outline of the report.

The second chapter contains a review of related literature. The following explanation is based on a review of related literature:

Review of Previous Research 2. Theories Reviewed 3. Framework of Thought

Chapter III discusses the method of investigation, which is divided into three parts: the research design, the source of data and variables, and the method of data collection.

Chapter IV is about data analysis, and it is divided into two sections: research description and analysis of the results.

The final chapter is Chapter V, which consists of

